It is, however, not deemed worthy of credence, and has all been before the Governor and rejected by him some time back. It is the last desperate dodge to save the life of this wretched criminal.

AFFAIRS AT ALBANY.

New-York and Brooklyn Legislation—A Pile Ready for Third Reading—The Paid Jury Bill Killed—City Railroads, &c., &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Saturday, March 26, 1859.

The Grinding Committee has become the chief attraction of the Capitol for a season. Legislation is stupefied and slow both in the Senate and the Assembly chamber. But the wheel of the Committee of Nine turns perpetually, and the local bills are already almost exhausted. Unless the bridges, and tunnels, and City railroads go in, there will be nothing whatever to feed their mill with in a few days. This morning the Williamsburg Railroads were turned out, and it is understood that they will go to the same Select Committee to stifle one or other of them, or out of the two to compound a third, that will be satisfactory to the conflicting parties. The Committee waits till Tuesday or Wednesday afternoon before acting upon them. The tunnel checked up the hopper, and had to be withdrawn by its friends. The Woman's Library bill commended itself to universal favor and went through without a whisper of objection; so did the Williamsburg Fire Department act; and so, too, the bill making the price a reputable case to be paid for the publication of legal notices.

The Brooklyn Water and Sewerage bills are still in the hands of the Cities and Villages,—the members yet hesitating which to report,—the Commissioners' or the Common Council's bill. The Roving Railroad—one of LIVINGSTON'S pets—is number 307 on General Orders, and cannot afford to wait until it is regularly reached. The Port Warden's bill lies No. 310 on General Orders. Its friends wait for a high tide to float it unobserved through the Committee of Nine. The Jamaica Fisheries, the Brooklyn Almshouse, the Gold Spring Railroad, the Wallabout Monument, and the American Missionary Society have been ordered to a third reading.

Into that entertaining order the House went yesterday morning, and in it are likely to remain till Wednesday—perhaps Saturday—morning next, for the file of bills engrossed is immense, and every few hours the Senate opens the pile and thrusts in a dozen more.

The following bills, among others, had their third reading last evening:

In relation to the commitment of vagrants and lunatics in Kings County, authorizing the overseers of the poor instead of justices to commit them.

To regulate the action of the New-York Common Council in the matter that District-Attorney BOSS had all hands of them indicted for.

To alter the map of your City—two bills widening Seventh-avenue at its upper end and laying down the Central Park as fixed by the next bill.

The Central Park Extension.

To provide for the payment of interest on the drafts of the Canal Commissioners on the Auditor of the Canal Department—ayes 78, noes 12—an amendment having been inserted authorizing the payment of interest on the certificates hereafter to be issued by the Canal Commissioners precisely as upon the drafts heretofore drawn.

The Senate bill making appropriations for the Canal debt and for the maintenance of the canals for the year that commenced Oct. 1, 1858.

Granting the people's right in a message lot of ground in the First Ward of New-York to the Rev. HOMER ARNOLD and his wife—but this was a two-thirds bill, and though it got 84 votes, lacked two of the necessary number and so was tabled.

Mr. RUYSSENAER'S bill to pay Jurors in your City had been fought over by the hour since early in the session. One City member after another had been conquered of his prejudices, until it seemed ready to glide easily into a snug place on the statute books. Mr. SYRACUSE latterly having taken so much interest in it as to come to be considered its godfather. Last evening, about 6½ o'clock, Jacob Smith arose, when its title was read, and asked to have it recommitted to the Judiciary Committee, with instructions to them never to report it again. This carrying, the bill was as dead as a door-nail. At 7½ P. M. the house reassembling, Mr. SYRACUSE made a desperate effort to perform upon it the same experiment that Pantagruel wrought upon Epistemon, when a sabre had severed his head from his body, and sent it rolling in the dust. Epistemon's head grew so fast in three days that an unusual disposition to sneeze was all that Pantagruel perceived amiss in him. But SYRACUSE was not so lucky. He tried reconsiderations and rescindings, and all sorts of plasters to heal broken bills, but it was no go, and the hangers-on about your Courts, who manage to turn up on Juries every three weeks, must look to the same source as ever to get their pay,—the law refuses to support them.

The Senate ordered to a third reading to-day the Destig's Harbor and Greenport Ferry, and Mr. SYRACUSE'S New-York Steamboat and Railroad Accident Insurance Company. They made the Public Health Bill a special order for Tuesday, 11 A. M. Their grinding apparatus is new yet, and the cool deliberation with which the most unimportant matters are discussed is exceedingly refreshing.

The City Railroad schemes—three of them at least—are the Assembly's special order for Tuesday next. It was a dodge of their enemies to make them a special order and to save them out of the hands of the Committee of Nine. But the effort to stop them will not probably prove availing. The objection to them is threefold: 1st. A Democratic objection—that they create powerful political machines, of which Republicans will have the control. 2d. The objection of outsiders, who believe in Railroads, but have not been let in; several stage-route proprietors are in this category and are busy trying to organize an opposition in the Legislature. 3d. The honest, creditable objection to giving away valuable franchises while parties stand ready to buy them at a high figure. The whole subject has been amply discussed during the past week, the near approach of the subject in Committee making it the topic and the talk of every circle. The three roads favorably reported on hold the following routes, which as they are quite sure to go through you may as well republish now:

1. The Seventh-avenue (alias parallel) Railroad starts at the Central Park, runs down Seventh-avenue to Broadway, (at Forty-fourth-street,) down Broadway to Union-square, down University-place to Waverley-place, up Waverley to Green-street, down Green to Canal, down Canal to West Broadway, down West Broadway to Barclay, up Barclay to Broadway, back to Church, up Church to Canal, up Mercer to Eighth, down Eighth to University-place, and back by a double track to Central Park.

2. The Fourteenth-street Railroad leaves the Hudson River with a double track up Fourteenth-street to Hudson, down Hudson to Troy, then, on a single track, up Troy to Fourth, down Fourth to Macdougal, down Macdougal to Bleecker, then, with a double track, down Bleecker, and Crosby, and Elm, and Chatham to the foot of the Park. Returning, a single track follows Bleecker-street from Macdougal to Troy.

3. The Avenue D Road lies in Chatham, East Broadway, Columbia and Avenue D. These three are a rare thing, and how many more is all a matter of guess. GLAUCUS.

THE TEHUANTEPEC ROUTE.

Detailed Narrative of a Journey Across the Tehuantepec Isthmus.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I avail myself of the first agreeable opportunity to give you a faithful statement of my experience in traversing the Tehuantepec route. We left San Francisco at 3 P. M. of Feb. 19, with 122 passengers on board of the Golden Age, and with but one incident worthy of note, made the usual pleasant run to Acapulco, arriving there at about 6 A. M. on Sunday, the 27th. Off Manzanilla we spoke the United States sloop-of-war Vandalia, SINCLAIR commander, from Guaymas, bound for the different accessible ports in the Pacific to the northward of Panama. We were boarded by one of her boats, bringing two passengers bound for the East. On the 25th, at about 11 A. M., one of our Tehuantepec passengers, from St. Louis, Mo., by name R. S. CLARK, while under mental aberration, superinduced by whisky, let himself down over the guards, and before a boat could reach him he had sunk. Among his effects was found upwards of $600 in gold, which the purser of the Golden Age took charge of, to be handed to the United States Consul at Panama. Shortly after coming to anchor in the port of Acapulco, the passengers intending to cross the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, sixteen in all, left the Golden Age and proceeded on board the steamer Oregon, which lay at anchor some two hundred yards distant. At 11½ A. M. on the same day we weighed anchor and proceeded on our way to "La Ventosa," distant about 200 miles. We reached our destination about 9 o'clock in the evening of Monday the 28th February. Shortly after our coming to an anchor (about three hundred yards from the shore) we were boarded by an agent of the Tehuantepec Transit Company, who informed us that at daylight on the ensuing morning boats would be sent to convey us ashore with our baggage. On the next morning at 6 o'clock two large metal boats of Francis' patent came alongside, and we proceeded to get ourselves and baggage in one of them, a feat of no ordinary difficulty and some danger. Heavy rollers were coming in, and the ship was careening violently from one side to the other, and it required the exercise of no ordinary skill to prevent the boats from being stove by the companion-way, or being crowded under the wheel, and corresponding agility on the part of the passengers to get in the boats, and excellent judgment in the selection of the exact time when they should spring in. We proceeded to the shore, our boat manned by seven native shiremen, whose performances in the handling of their boat would equal the best efforts of the Barnegat or Long Island surf boatmen. When within about twenty yards of the shore our boat grounded, the crew leaped overboard, and on their shoulders conveyed the passengers and their luggage to the dry beach.

Now, a word or two with reference to "La Ventosa." This place must ever be a stumbling-block in the way of the perfect success of the route, even if the serious difficulties and embarrassments of which I shall more particularly speak should or can be remedied. It is simply an open roadstead, and not an harbor, exposed—except in one or two points of the compass—to all the wind and sea. The time that we landed was said to be one of the most favorable, still a heavy surf was on; our ship was rolling sufficient to jump her masts out, and had our boats been unskillfully managed one or the other perhaps would have been upset.

A better place, some four miles distant, has been found, which, it is said, possesses a secure anchorage close to the shore, and is only exposed to the sea and wind from but a few points of the compass. At 6½ o'clock on Tuesday, March 1, the passengers, together with their baggage, were on the beach at "La Ventosa." We then walked through the heavy sand to the Company's office, about two hundred and fifty yards, and our baggage was transported thither by the natives, carrying it on their shoulders. The morning was fine, but the weather intensely hot, and continued so until we were in the Gulf of Mexico. We arrived at the Company's office, which, without flooring, was simply an erection of undressed poles, twenty feet in height, but placed close together, and fastened by thongs of leather, and the roof covered with dried grass. Our baggage was there received by a Mexican official, who placed around each piece a cord, affixing a leaden seal. It was then taken in charge by the baggage-master of the Transit route who proceeded to weigh each piece, charging ten cents per pound beyond fifty pounds, which being collected, the baggage was checked and a corresponding numbered check given. These ceremonies occupied about an hour, and the word was given to start. Some seven Concord coaches were on hand to transport us and our baggage to the city of Tehuantepec about 15 miles distant. We were compelled to walk through heavy sand about three-quarters of a mile, as the horses were unable to pull us through it. Finally we mounted our coach and proceeded over a tolerably smooth road to the city, reaching it in about three hours.

At 5 P. M., after partaking of a tolerably severe meal, which was urged upon our consideration as a dinner, and paying California prices of 1850 for everything, we again proceeded on our journey, having nine persons within and two, exclusive of the driver, outside of our coach. Owing to a want of proper management, two coaches were crowded with passengers, while in the others there were but one to three persons each. The road was tolerably good and level for the first twenty miles, save every now and then some rough places to cross, we following a new road which had been cut through the low woods and jungle by the company, and well lighted by the fired stumps, which were being successfully removed in that way. We met with no running streams, nor with water, save that which was brought and stored in barrels by the way-side for the horses' use, until we were within about fifteen miles of Almaloya, when, at intervals, we crossed the Rio de los Perro, and the Rio Verde, two running streams of insignificant size. At GASEY'S camp, about twelve miles this side of Almaloya, we stopped, about 3 o'clock in the morning, to change our four diminutive horses, and in their stead had four American mules. About 4 A. M. we again started to overcome the most arduous portion of the road, leading almost the entire balance of the way over mountains, the highest of which, La Chevéle, is estimated to be upwards of seven hundred and fifty feet in height.

The inmates of our coach were well tired, having then been on the road eleven hours, without any rest, impossible to sleep, crowded as it was, and jolting to such an extent as to pound one almost to the consistence of a jelly. We had proceeded but a portion of the way, when the driver bade us dismount, as we were about to climb a long hill, and that the "cattle" were unable to draw the coach with its passengers. We walked probably a quarter of a mile, then remounted, then thundered down the hill, then again a mile or two of riding, then again dismounting and walking, and so it continued until we had reached and passed beyond the peak of "La Chevéle," when we passed into the plains of that name, and at six o'clock in the morning arrived at Almaloya, completely wearied out by fatigue, and went to sleep. We were shown to a "resting" place, called and lettered by the imposing name of "Smith's Hotel," where we found some "frijoles" badly smoked, some coarse corn bread and miserable coffee. About 8 A. M. (two hours after our arrival) we were told to mount away, not upon a coach but upon horses, donkeys, and mules of a quality rarely seen. We got on a diminutive donkey, but was crucified in bestriding a saddle, the stirrups and leathers of which were evidently intended for a man who, by some freak of nature, had the lower portion of his body reversed, for they were set behind the centre of the saddle.

At 4 P. M. of that day, after a ride of thirty-three miles over hill and dale, beneath the rays of a burning sun, we arrived at "Sanderson's," a hostelry like our friend SMITH'S, but in some respects better. At 5 P. M., we fed; at 6, all wearied out, retired to our beds, which were cots simply, and naught else save a pillow and musquito bar. At 6 A. M., we were on the road again, and variously on donkeys and diminutive horses, away we sped for Suchil, said to be thirty-four miles distant, at which point we fondly hoped our trials would cease. At about 10½ A. M., we passed the fifteen mile camp, passing over the Sarabia, enduring excessive heat, and almost devoured by a small venomous black fly, called "Rotodoe" by the natives. At the camp we halted to take a lunch and recruit, many of my companions, some of them strong men, inured to labor and hardship, complaining of fatigue and of feeling ill, but we comforted ourselves that our tribulations would be over when we reached Suchil, and should board the steamer of that name. We again mounted and had proceeded but about a hundred yards, when one of our companions, a California passenger, by name FRANCIS HAYWARD, got off his animal, staggered and fell; with the aid of the natives we took him back to the camp we had just quitted, but there was no person by or to be find who possessed the medical skill to aid the poor fellow, and in about ten minutes he died, apparently in great pain, his strength having undoubtedly been previously exhausted by the heat and fatigue of the journey. He had upon his person some $1,200 in gold, a valuable Cooper watch, a sight draft in his own favor for $500, and other valuables. He was buried in a rapidly-dug grave, in the clothing he wore, without a coffin, a gunny bag simply thrown over his face and hands to shield them from the dirt. His effects were inventoried in the presence of a majority of the passengers, and taken possession of by Mr. STEVENS, the General Superintendent of the stage route, to be held for those who may prove themselves legally entitled to them. This personal death, together with the fatigue and illness of many of our party, did not contribute to our comfort, but we consoled each other with the prospect of soon being at "Suchil." Many of us walked much of the distance, enduring the labor and the increased heat, rather than to suffer the torments of the saddle-jades; our road led over a long ridge of mountains, and literally rough in many places. At five in the afternoon, all of us, more dead than alive, reached the town of "Suchil," an imposing city of three stalked wigwams and one wooden house. We had thus accomplished a journey over land of from 110 to 120 miles, that being the distance by the road we had traveled from La Ventosa, on the Pacific side, to Suchil, occupying three days and two nights, with but one night of rest, and 6 hard days at that. The road, not altogether rough, but the coaches, some exceptions, the mules fearfully reliable, the drivers not to be surpassed. The native horses, which generally used, diminutive in size, seldom exceeding twelve hands, were but just broken into harness, and seldom cut up the hundred capers on the road imaginable—kick, rear, and plunge, bite, fall down, roll over—and when it is considered that much of the road between the Rio Verde and Almaloya leads up and down over mountains, in narrow fords, and by the side of precipices, on look down which makes the head swim, it will be thought that the journey has its perils.

To our great disappointment, when we reached Suchil, the steamer of that name, which was to take us to Minatitlan, there to embark on the Quaker City, had not been heard of, although fully five days behind. Various were the conjectures as to the cause of the delay. But wearied out, and after comparatively a comfortable meal, we accepted a friend's hospitable offer to take a cot at his house. During the early part of the evening we were all badly bitten by some venomous insects, and my friend remarked, "There is nothing in these house-cots trouble you after you get in bed, except, perhaps, fleas, or ticks; you have a mosquito bar. There are a number of tarantulas in and about that old trunk yonder, but they don't trouble us when in bed, and we never fly about barefoot, so you may sleep comfortably."

Tired as I was, I gladly got into the cot, and earnestly hoped that the morrow would bring the steamer Suchil, to bear me away from so unenviable a place. I retired; about midnight I was awakened by feeling a tolerably large bite at my throat, and with the rapidity of thought I grasped at it with my hand, and my fingers clutched a hard-backed, long-legged animal, which I tore from my throat and threw violently from me. I sprang from my bed, put on my boots, emptying out I don't know how many venomous insects, got some tobacco out of my pocket, moistened it with saliva and clapped it to the wound. I ventured to awaken my nearest neighbor who, having gone to bed drunk, naturally enough shouted "Fire" with the lungs of a Stentor, thereby awakening some thirty of my sleeping companions. I ventured to explain to him, subdued the fire of his imagination, and intimated that I had but a few minutes to dance after the fashion of the "Bloter" in the ballet of "La Tarantula." He told me that in the office of the Company I would find a medicine-chest, and in it a bottle of ammonia, and to apply it at once, and not to dance until I had taken an internal and external application, which being a reasonable request, and I tolerably fatigued, I complied with. I hastily sought the medicine-chest, found the ammonia, drank a teaspoonful mixed with water, and applied some to it to my neck. As for returning to my bed, with the conviction that my tarantula friend was within it, was impossible; my imagination was powerfully exercised. I felt in fact, that I had gone in. I was bound, however, before death, to view the monster, who, at the solemn hour of midnight, had "stole my breath" away, and seizing the lantern which swung aloft in a neighboring caravansery, I sped to my cot and searched; there were no appliances in the way of bedding, saving one pillow, the odor of which suggested to me that my predecessor must have been actively engaged as a butcher; at the foot of the cot was a blanket, into its folds I searched, with horror, but rushed the largest, strongest, able-bodied black cockroach that ever shocked my gaze; he jumped to the ground, I after him with murderous intent, he described a circle, I described something, he was beneath my uplifted foot, and as that foot (me pede Herculem) descended to crush him, he vamoosed in a hole on the ground. I was beside myself with joy at the prospect of continued life; my fears being groundless, I apologized to my sober room-mates, most of whom were with saucer eyes, anxiously waiting for my dance, and speedy exit. I flung myself again upon the couch, and slept soundly. The morning came, and with its first dawn, I found such irritation of my flesh that I conceived something must have bitten me. I sought the river side, stripped off my clothing and made a superficial examination of my person, and counted 153 bites, which were all in front, thereby showing my bravery and great power of endurance on the part of my persecutors. I sprang on the bank of the Coatzacoalcos River, the water laving my feet, and prepared for a plunge, to drown such of the monsters as might still be adhering to me; and as I was about to plunge, I saw a log quietly disengage itself from the bank, but a few yards above me, which came quietly towards me. I waited, thinking it would pass by—when, to my horror, it opened its mouth and made a dash for the bank on which I stood. It was an alligator. I stood not on the order of my going, but precipitately fled.

At noon of that day we were startled by the acceptable announcement that a bungo had arrived, bringing the mails, and a rush was made to the river to ascertain the whereabouts of the steamer. We then learned that the steamer Suchil, having on board the passengers and mails for San Francisco from New Orleans, had been unable to cross a bar some distance down the river, and had anchored there. Mr. STEVENS determined to try and put the letter bags across to Veniosa by 12 M. of the next day, at which, by the schedule time, the steamer Oregon was to leave the anchorage for Acapulco in order to connect them with the Pacific Mail Steamship Co.'s steamer, bound for San Francisco, no hope being entertained that the passengers could be put across, and, in fact, at that time none had made their appearance, nor could they have done so for hours afterwards, as we subsequently ascertained, and hence the newspaper mail and the passengers must have remained upon the Isthmus until the 21st inst. A rush was made for all the available "bungos" by the passengers, and the writer of this was unfortunate enough to be one of seventeen that filled a large mahogany dug-out or bungo, intended to be propelled by oars or paddles. All the other dug-outs started in advance of us, and we were turned out loose to "paddle our own canoe" down the river, without assistance from employés of the Company to aid us in getting to the steamer. We were cheated, however, with the assurance that the steamer was only some 15 miles below, and having the current with us, believed that we could reach it by dark. We left Suchil about 2 P. M. of that day, Friday, March 4. Most of our crew was composed of passengers from San Francisco, nearly all of whom were worn out and disgusted by the fatigues and exposure that they had undergone. Two of us used the paddles, while another grasped the long oar, which served as a rudder. The current of the river at Suchil at this time ran about two to two and a half knots per hour. The river was full of snags and bars, which required considerable dexterity and strength on the part of our helmsman to avoid. Hour after hour passed on, night came, and yet no steamer light to cheer us. After dark we heard the plash of oars and hailing, was informed that the boat contained passengers bound to San Francisco. We anxiously inquired how far down the river the steamer was, and they answered (and as we then supposed jestingly) "a day's journey." We had nothing to eat nor drink save the river water. About 6 o'clock that night we got aground, and many, nearly all of our crew, were so jaded and worn out that they were reluctant to get out and aid in pulling the "bungo" into deep water. We toiled for an hour, at first dragging the boat some hundred yards further on the bar, deceived by somewhat deeper water, which suddenly shoaled. Again, one of our companions, who seemed disregardful of alligators, in a fit of desperation traversed the river right and left until he ascertained where the channel was, and again we toiled and tugged at the boat until an hour spent, we succeeded in getting afloat. Again we encouraged each other and plied the oars, sometimes pitching into bars and snags, but merely involving some extra labor to disengage our boat and a few minutes' delay. At about a quarter to two we descried afar off the steamer's light; it created but little enthusiasm, for many of our crew, sick and worn out, lay upon the bottom of the boat unconscious, and those at work were wearied to such an extent as to be reckless. We clambered on board, and were kindly greeted by the officers and crew, who, with their limited means, tried to make us comfortable; but the endeavor to sleep the balance of the night was almost fruitless, for the air was thick with mosquitos and "rotodos," and the floor alive with fleas. In the morning, at about 6 o'clock, we started for Minatitlan, about fifty miles distant, and reached that town about 3 P. M. of Saturday, March 6; found the Quaker City waiting, and at 5 P. M. started on our way, dropped down the river and at 9 P. M. crossed the bar, stood out to sea, [illegible] Sunday morning, March 8, [illegible] Orleans.

The steamer Suchil, with a powerful engine, an iron hull, drawing light two and a half feet, and but a fortnight after the rains ceased to fall and the dry season commenced, was unable to reach the town of Suchil by upwards of forty miles; what must be the result as the dry season advances? I have thus detailed without the slightest exaggeration my actual experience across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, and regret that these embarrassments to the perfect success of the route exist, but I deem it to be my duty to state my experience in order that [illegible]

The slave trade is growing at the South. The Wilmington (N. C.) Patriot says that 2,000 negroes passed through that place in January, and not less than 50,000, it is informed, went into the cotton region during the last year.

A tumult occurred a day or two ago in the Lunatic Asylum at Toronto, some of the patients rising upon their keepers, but they were overpowered and handcuffed.

WRECK OF THE BRITISH GUN-BOAT JASEUR.

Reported Loss of Forty Lives.

The Cunard steamer Kermit, from Havana and Nassau, N. P., arrived at this port about 4 o'clock on Saturday morning. Among her passengers from Havana is Mr. SAMUEL DUNBAR, who has communicated the particulars of a most disastrous shipwreck, which occurred near Jamaica, W. I., on the 4th inst., and the probable loss of forty out of sixty persons constituting the crew of the vessel. Mr. DUNBAR states that the intelligence had first been made public at the time of clearing of the mails for New-York, the news having arrived from a port on the south side of the island only a short time before the sailing of the steamer. Mr. DUNBAR having learned the facts, by accident, just as he was on the point of embarking in the steamer. He states that the British gun-boat Jaseur, which was lying at Kingston, Jamaica, on the 1st of March, received orders to depart immediately to cruise on the coast of Cuba, and left port for that purpose. On the night of the 4th inst. she struck a submerged rock, to the northward of Jamaica. The pumps were immediately manned and kept working until daylight, when it was discovered that the water was rapidly gaining, and that it would be impossible to keep her up but a short time.

The captain then ordered a raft to be constructed and to this raft were attached the two boats belonging to the vessel, and the men, sixty in number, all went aboard, with such scanty provisions as they were able to secure from the sinking wreck. A heavy gale set in soon after the men took to the raft, and they had not been out above two hours when the seas were swept overboard and drowned. All efforts to rescue them were hopeless, the men had all they could do to prevent being washed away after them.

The captain seeing it was useless to cling longer to the raft, took nineteen men with him in the smaller boat, and the mate the remaining twenty-nine into the larger one. It was considered useless to attempt to keep together, and the captain said they would each make the best of their way to land, without reference to each other. In a short time the boats were separated by the wind, and the larger boat, containing thirty men, has not been heard of since, and is believed to have been lost, with all on board.

The little provisions the men on the small boat had taken with them were soon consumed, and the wretched party was subjected to the double sufferings of exposure and famine. At last, when all were completely exhausted and parching, the boat was driven to a port on the southern coast of Cuba, and the entire party survived. The Government immediately sent out two vessels to cruise in search of the missing boat; but their search had proved fruitless.

There has been no official confirmation of this intelligence received in this City, but certain circumstances favor the presumption that the report is correct. Lord EUSTACE CECIL, and the Hon. Mr. LEGGE of the Coldstream Guards, who are now in this City, stated yesterday to Mr. ANDERSON, the British Consul, that they recently made a passage in this steamer from Port au Platte to Kingston, Jamaica, and the description of the vessel and the number of the crew corresponds to that of the Jaseur now reported lost. The Jaseur is a British steam gun-boat of 95-horse power, and stationed in the West Indies. She is numbered 062 on the Royal Navy List. The names of her officers and date of their commissions are as follows:

Lieutenant and Commanding, John B. Seurr, 20th July, 1857.

Assistant-Surgeon Thomas Craig, 15th August, 1857.

Second Master John R. N. Moss, 20th July, 1857.

The entire crew numbered about 60 persons. It is, however, quite possible that the Captain's boat, containing the thirty persons, may have reached some other part of the coast, and not have been reported. The next intelligence from Havana will be looked for with much interest by those who had friends on board the vessel.

WRECK OF THE SPANISH BRIG SAMMAMES.

The bark William A. Banks, Capt. BARNARD, which arrived at this port yesterday from Cienfuegos, picked up on the 20th a boat containing the Captain, T. FERRANA, the mates, and nine of the crew of the Spanish brig Sammames, which had been abandoned on the 16th, she being in a sinking condition from stress of weather. She was bound for Cork from Cardenas. The captain, mates, and two of the seamen were subsequently put on board the Spanish bark Providencia, bound to Barcelona, and the rest of the men came to this port.

The Auburn Prison Revolt—Letter from Inspector Bailey.

State Prison Inspector BAILEY writes to the Albany Evening Journal in relation to the last revolt in Auburn State Prison. He justifies the extreme measures adopted by Warden KIRKPATRICK, believing that they were forced upon him by an issue which the convicts themselves had made up with their keepers. Mr. BAILEY adds:

"I am aware that a sentiment prevails in the outer world that State Prison convicts should be treated to 'moral suasion' alone, or if punished, by a means so softened and mild as to become next to no punishment at all. I am not disposed to speak lightly of the power of the law of kindness in its operations on even hardened characters, but if moral suasion fails when brought to bear with all the force of the outer world to keep men out of State Prison, is it not asking rather too much to require us to govern convicted villains by simply the coaxing and leading process?"

Mr. BAILEY proceeds to discuss the nature of prison punishments; arguing the absolute necessity of exemplary discipline, regretting the tendency of the State Legislature to abridge the powers of prison officers in this regard, and taking blame to himself for having, as one of the Inspectors, consented to the prohibition of the shower-bath. He gives his opinion that the abolition of the shower-bath had much to do in encouraging the recent insurrection; and adds:

"The convicts have taken the liberty to infer from this fact that either timidity, or a sickly public sentiment would hold the officers back from severe measures, and therefore have dared to revolt and take the consequences. I is my deliberate conviction that the shower-bath is both a safe and salutary mode of punishment for convicts when in discreet hands—being sure to subdue if any punishment can subdue, and speedy in its operation. We need a punishment which will bring a convict to terms at once, so that the difficulty can be disposed of, and the man put back to his work, and this the shower-bath is adapted to accomplish, and this too without serious peril. * * *"

Three Murderers Executed at New-Orleans.

From the New-Orleans Picayune, 16th.

This morning HEINRICH HAAS, JOSEPH LINDSAY and PEZEE SMITH, all convicted of murder, suffered the penalty of death by hanging. At an early hour a large crowd besieged the gates of the prison, eagerly seeking to obtain a sight of the terrible spectacle. This morbid craving was not, however, satisfied, and none could obtain admittance. Shortly after 10 o'clock the three condemned men appeared, escorted by the Rev. Father DUFAU and his assistant, and officers of the prison. They were dressed in white, in their shirts and pants, the head covered with a white night-cap, and their hands tied behind their backs; each wore a crucifix suspended to a black ribbon around his neck. Their countenances were calm, even smiling. They took their seats on the fatal bench, and the hangman, a negro, disguised with a loose black domino and a mask, fixed the rope around their necks and disappeared in the cell behind.

LINDSAY, who is quite a young man, first spoke, and addressed the crowd with a clear and ringing voice. He acknowledged his crime, and said the penalty was but just; he had sinned against the la

COURT OF OYER AND TERMINER.

SUPREME COURT—Special Term—Recess.

Widening of Reade-street.—This is an application to confirm the report of the Commissioners of Estimate and Assessment appointed in the matter of widening Reade-street on its north side and west of Broadway. There was a similar proceeding for widening Reade-street east of Broadway, the report in which was recently confirmed by Justice Davies. The application for confirmation in the present case has been strenuously opposed by the various property-owners whose interests are affected.

The objections to the report are chiefly these:

1. That while the widening was confined to the west side of Broadway, the assessments had extended over and beyond the east side, so as to cover many lots which had already been made to suffer in the previous improvement.

2. On behalf of St. Andrew's Church, eight feet of width in front has been cut away, desecrating the altar, notwithstanding the sum which has been paid, $6,000. It is urged that the Church property ought not to be assessed for these improvements on the same principles with that devoted to secular uses, but should be shown favor.

3. Comptroller Hawes was one of the Commissioners. It is urged that by accepting the office of Comptroller he incapacitated himself from serving as Commissioner, also as entire Board of Commissioners might be composed of City officials.

4. The Commissioners were nominated and appointed by the Justices of the Supreme Court. It is urged that they cannot be lawfully so appointed; that the statute requires they should be nominated by the Corporation and appointed by the Justices of the Supreme Court.

5. There are, also, many objections to the awards made, as respects individual lots, chiefly on the ground that the sums assessed are disproportionate.

The argument has occupied two days; a large number of counsel being engaged.

James T. Brady for the Corporation; T. James Glover for St. Andrew's Church and the Anderson property; General Sanford, H. C. Hayner, J. Mansfield Devlin, Wm. M. Evarts and Charles Tracy for other property owners.

Before Justice Ingraham.

Robert Davis vs. William Hargreaves.—Motion granted unless the plaintiff in ten days charges the defendant in execution.

The New-York and New-Haven Railroad Company vs. Robert Schuyler et al.—The motion to frame separate issues, to be tried by a jury, are denied. Costs in in each case to abide event.

The State vs. John H. Dykes et al.—Motion denied; costs to abide event.

SUPERIOR COURT—General Term.

The Woodruff and Beach Iron Works vs. Henry A. Chittenden (and four other suits.)—Judgment affirmed, with costs.

The President, &c., of the City Bank of New-Haven vs. Simon Perkins.—Judgment for plaintiffs on the verdict.

John Turner et al vs. Morgan Pinder.—New trial granted on terms.

Before Justice Monell.

William Small vs. Henry L. Bulkley, impld.—Ordered that plaintiffs file security for defendant's costs herein within twenty days from service of a copy of this order; in default of such proceedings of plaintiffs to be stayed until filing of such security and the securities therein justify, if excepted to; defendant to have $10 costs of this motion to abide event.

Neil M. Hegland vs. Theodore Sellers et al.—Ordered that Tracy, Weld & Olmstead be and they are hereby substituted as attorneys for the defendants in this action.

Francis H. Sellers vs. William O'Brien et al.—Referred to William Kent, as sole Referee.

The Park Bank vs. Robert Davis—Motion granted.

Before Justice Sutherland.

Clarke C. Wilson vs. Albert Lewis and wife.—Ordered that she be allowed to appear and put in her answer in this action, separate and apart from her husband, Albert Lewis, and be co-defendant herein.

MARINE COURT.

A TOTAL ECLIPSE.

A total eclipse of this Court is expected to occur on Monday. This is a rare phenomenon in the judicial firmament; as the statute requires the Court to be held every judicial day. It so happens, however, that the illness of all three of the Justices will probably prevent the Court from being in session for a day or two. Justice McCarthy has been for some little time traveling for his health. Justice Mathean has been for several days detained at home by indisposition, and now Justice Thomsett is obliged by the same cause to be absent. In a day or two, however, Justice Mathean expects to resume his seat.

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

[illegible]

[illegible] Mr. Fayette Reynolds, one of the bartenders at the Washington House, corner of Fourteenth-street and Broadway, who was poisoned on Thursday last, died on Sunday morning. This is the second death that has taken place of the persons who were poisoned, Mr. Gazzaniga, a Spaniard, is the only one whose condition is considered any way critical. Mrs. Reynolds was buried on Saturday, her stepmother and sister-in-law being still in the hands of Dr. Dennison, for medical examination.

The remains of Mr. Rossmann will be taken to Richmond, Va., for interment, where his friends reside. Dr. Dennison, will not, however, make the examination, the deceased argued.

Mahalaw Burke, the servant girl suspected of having poisoned the food, is still detained in custody in the Eighteenth Ward Station-house. An examination of her trunks has led to the discovery of various articles which are supposed to have been stolen, thus indicating a want of honesty on her part. She is about twenty-five years of age, and has a coarse, vindictive expression of countenance. She has been in this country two years, and had been in Mrs. Reynolds's family only four months. Besides a sister living at Yorkville, she says she has no relatives in this country. The poisoning tragedy has entirely broken up the boarding-house, the only one of the former boarders now remaining being Mr. Cavallo, who is too ill to leave his bed. Mrs. Reynolds was a widow only two months having died five years since. She leaves three daughters, the eldest fourteen and the younger seven.

On Friday Coroner Schirmer proceeded with the inquest. The following is the additional evidence taken:

Miss Emily Bedham sworn.—On Wednesday morning Margaret Burke waited on the table the same as usual; she poured out the coffee in a room adjoining that in which the boarders sat, and brought it into them; I did not come down until rather late; I poured out my own coffee, and put sugar in it; I was not sick at all; my mother drank tea, which Margaret poured out; she kitchen and brought up tea to her; she became sick immediately after drinking it.

Ellen German, sworn.—I am a servant in the employ of Mr. Whiteman, next door; on Tuesday evening, about nine o'clock, Margaret Burke came into our kitchen, and told me that she and Mrs. Bedham had another quarrel, and Mrs. Bedham had told her that she intended to pay her her money and let her go, even if she had to beg or borrow it; Margaret said if she didn't get her money she would raise a row—she would have all the people in Fourteenth-street, even the little children, around the house; she told me that she said these words to Miss Bedham; on Thursday about noon, I saw Margaret; she was in bed, but did not appear sick; saw no evidence of vomiting or purging in any vessel in the room where she was lying; I asked her why she didn't get up and do something for Mrs. Bedham, as she was very sick; she said she had tried to get up, but was so sick she had to go to bed again; she didn't seem to be affected nor in any way concerned about the matter.

Dr. Dooley sworn.—I was called at nine o'clock on on Wednesday morning, by a medical student, to give an opinion as to whether the people were poisoned or not; Margaret Burke let me in; I was called again last evening at 6 o'clock, to attend Mr. and Mrs. Robinson; they were very sick, vomiting and purging freely; Mr. Robinson has since died; Mr. and Mrs. Robinson were not taken sick after partaking breakfast, but immediately after taking lunch, at one o'clock, when they had tea and cocoa broth; they were seized with the symptoms described.

The inquisition was here adjourned till Tuesday, at 10 A. M., when it is expected Dr. Dennison will present his report touching his examination of the stomachs of the deceased parties, and the inquisition be brought to a close.

BROOKLYN INTELLIGENCE.

THE WATER CELEBRATION.—The Special Committee of the Common Council appointed to make arrangements for celebrating the introduction of water, intend that it shall be on a scale surpassing in grandeur anything that has ever occurred in this city or New-York. The Committee meets every Monday, in the City Hall, and already a large number of societies have signified their intention of taking part in the proceedings, also a number of business firms. The "medal" to be struck off, to commemorate the introduction of water, is described as follows: The obverse presents a figure of Aquarius, with the legend, "Nassau Water Works, commenced July 31, 1856." The reverse, the Pump House at Ridgewood, with the inscription "Water introduced Dec. 18, 1859, completed April 1, 1860." The "Nassau" will doubtless be changed to "Ridgewood" before the medal is executed by City Authorities.

A MISSING MAN FOUND DROWNED.—The body of John Ryan, of No. 110 Tenth-street, was found in Newtown Creek yesterday. The deceased has been missing since the 16th of February last. He was about 50 years of age. A Coroner's Jury rendered a verdict that he came to his death from accidental drowning.

FIRE.—The ten-pin alley on Fulton near Hudson-avenue, owned by WILLIAM GOODSCHOW, was partially destroyed by fire at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. Loss $100. Insured in the Brooklyn City Insurance Company.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—A widow woman named ANN WILKS, residing near Penny Bridge, at the foot of Smith-street, fell from a window of her residence to the sidewalk, Saturday night, by which she sustained a fracture of the skull. She died from the injuries received, during the night. The deceased was about 50 years old, and was the widow of JAMES P. WILKS. She leaves a number of young children.

RESIGNED.—The Rev. O. W. BRIGGS has tendered his resignation as pastor of the First Baptist Church, to take effect on the 1st of July next. The Washington-avenue Baptist Church and the Atlantic-street Baptist Church are both collecting funds to erect church edifices. The annual meeting of the Congregational Association will be held in Plymouth Church on the 4th of April next.

BROOKLYN LITERARY ASSOCIATION.—This Society has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President—L. D. St. George. Vice-President—B. F. Webb. Secretary—H. A. Dunning. Treasurer—W. H. Bloom. Editor—Charles Reilly.

BURGLARY.—On Saturday night last the house of James C. Bowne, corner of Franklin and Willoughby avenues, was entered by burglars and robbed of silver ware and jewelry to considerable value.

THE FEY DIVORCE CASE.—The Philadelphia Evening Journal recently published some very sharp remarks upon an article in the Tribune on the FEY DIVORCE CASE. It attributed the authorship of the article to WM. H. FEY, Esq., from whom its editor soon after received the following note:

PHILADELPHIA, March 24, 1860.
No. 1,812 Chestnut-street, Colonnade Row.

SIR: In your journal of yesterday there is an article for which you alone are responsible as editor, and upon which, filled with the grossest misrepresentations of my acts and my mother's House, Your assertions therein are unfounded and false. I therefore proclaim you a liar and a moral slanderer, and of course I hold myself responsible for any notice you may choose to take of this. YOURS, &c.,
WM. HENRY FEY.

F. W. GRAYSON, Esq.

In reply the Journal reasserts the truth of its former statements, and closes with the following references to the question of personal responsibility between its editor and Mr. FEY:

"We understand our relation towards him in this controversy, and he shall not shift positions with us by any miserable bravado. If he is right in accusing us of falsehood and wantonly slandering his and his brother, ours was the original insult and injury, and the case of taking satisfaction for it rests with him. He shall not put it upon us by means of a silly note, in which he chooses to assail us with coarse epithets and groundless imputations. There is a much more manly and effectual mode of vindication which he can accept, if he will, and to that we leave him."

MORE SCHOOL TROUBLES IN MASSACHUSETTS.—The Boston Traveller, March 23, says: "At the opening of the regular exercises in the Park-street school, in Chelsea, this morning, five boys refused to respond to the Lord's Prayer, unless they could be allowed to repeat the version which had been taught them by their religious instructor. As this was impracticable, under existing circumstances, Miss Cazneau, the Principal, called in Dr. Stevenson, of the Sub-Committee, who called upon these boys who referred to comply with the requirements of the Committee to take their places. Six boys stood up, whereupon Dr. Stevens directed them either to obey the rules of the school promptly, or take their hats and leave. One of the lads had his hat already upon his head, for a start, and left the school in high glee. As the case involves the question of religious rights, the school is in a somewhat critical condition, it numbers 130 pupils, some three-fourths of whom are sons of Catholic parents."

THE UNDERGROUND RAILROAD.—An Association, composed of the colored people of Canada West, the object of which is to erect a depot at Sandwich for the reception of passengers over the Underground Railroad from the Slave States, and the more efficiently to aid those who prefer freedom to slavery in their efforts to reach Canada, has been formed. The Association, which is to be called the Agricultural Mechanical and Educational Association of Canada West, is composed principally of those who, for several years, have been conductors and depot agents on the Underground Railroad. They have purchased at Sandwich fifty acres of ground, on which they intend to build houses for the use of those just arrived from slavery, until they can procure employment. They have also opened a free school for their benefit.—Detroit Advertiser.

THE FAMOUS MCDONOGH ESTATE.—The property of the McDonogh estate, according to the city of Baltimore, and situated in the second and third Districts, in New-Orleans, was sold at auction in that city on the 17th inst. The Bulletin says the aggregate of purchasers was larger than at any of the previous sales of this estate, and the prices realized show a decided increase in the value of city property; some lots went to almost fabulous prices, and the total amount realized ($232,940) exceeded the appraisement made late last year by nearly 33½ per cent. This is the second sale of the share of the city Baltimore of the McDonogh estate. The first one realized $207,310—total of both sales $510,630.

THE CANAL CONTRACTS IN OHIO.—The Cincinnati Commercial says: "We have good news from Columbus. The attempt to restore the fraudulent and unconstitutional canal contracts is a failure. The bill restoring the contracts which passed the House yesterday killed in the Senate by its indefinite postponement. The killing vote was decisive—21 to 11—and would have been still stronger against the swindle if the issue of restoration or repudiation had been directly presented.

APRIL.
Again, as Spring, with smiling wing,
To grief the growing earth advances,
Our April sky, like Laura's eye,
Is mingled tears and smiles at chances.
One sunny hour and then a shower,
A glow of heat and next a shiver,
We day the rose half open and blows,
To murmur too late to be river.
Through branching roots the Spring-life shoots,
The sap is swelling fast and blooming;
In warmer flood the mounting blood
Now leaps through every human bosom:
Dear Annie's eye, though still and shy,
Yet glistens with a tender meaning,
And though her lip to own her joy,
We see her heart is toward us leaning.
Oh, month of change! in all the range
Of seasons gayest and most mutable!
We give advice beyond all price—
A maxim worthy Captain Cuttle!
Let all who'd bear thy varied air—
Its sudden cold, the heat that smothers—
First see and try, next choose and buy

WHAT IS AMERICAN SOLIDIFIED MILK?

The following distinguished physicians, a Committee of the New York Academy of Medicine, have answered this as follows:

"The American Solidified Milk has been fully subjected to our critical examination; we have traced the milk of the rich pasturage of Dutchess County, from the udder to its final conversion into solidified milk, and we find it to be nothing but the solid constituents of pure milk, combined with a little less than an equal part, by weight, of white sugar; that it contains no other foreign substance; that the various salts of the original fluid are preserved intact, even the butter globules being unbroken; that it is readily and perfectly soluble in water, and when it is so dissolved in proper proportion, it is in fact milk, as it was secreted by the cow, with the sole exception of the sugar which accompanies it; that the only medicinal or culinary operations in which ordinary milk is required and this article cannot be used, are those in which sugar is inadmissible; while, on the other hand, whenever sugar is required in connection with milk they are here found together:

[illegible]

[illegible] of Quarantine?

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

[illegible] Commissioners of the Quarantine Hospital [illegible] last September, and expressed [illegible] of the present session of the Legislature, the people of this part and of the United States at large, have had no little interest as to the measures involved in the project of removing Quarantine.

[illegible] the mind part, the citizens of Richmond County have objected to the proposed location and Quarantine; and they have in effect declared that they had greater reasons to fear the spread of pestilent [illegible] than any other locality in or around the port. Prior to the year of 1858, this declaration was apparently true; but since then, and during that year, Brooklyn and her suburbs have suffered much from yellow fever, so that her citizens feel a deep anxiety in reference to all the real dangers of Quarantine. Indeed, the opinion now is pretty generally entertained that Brooklyn has as much, if not more, to fear from Quarantine as at present constituted, from Staten Island. It has been ascertained, that when the infection of yellow fever finds a lodgement in some of the wharf streets of Brooklyn, it generates and spreads therefrom with greater rapidity than from any portion of Staten Island. Kings County, therefore, and especially that part of her territory lying within the city limits of Brooklyn, has great reason to fear, and to ask protection from the full support proving real of the close [illegible] of the Quarantine establishment.

But what is the source of danger from Quarantine? Is it from infected vessels and cargoes, or from hospitals, passengers, and patients? More than half a century has elapsed since the Quarantine establishment was first located where it now is, it would seem that the [illegible] of imported diseases might be so well established as to make it entirely [illegible] to prevent the above interrogatories; but [illegible] danger from Quarantine, and it is [illegible] the promulgation of such erroneous [illegible] that New-Jersey refuses to grant to the State the Quarantine jurisdiction of Sandy Hook.

By the formal enactment passed by the Castleton Board of Health last Summer, and especially by the outrages committed by the midnight mob in pursuance of the same, persons unacquainted with the nature and character of infectious disease might easily infer that yellow fever alone spreads from hospitals, passengers and patients. But such is not the fact; and all just conjecture sustains the denial. The fact is, that the Castleton Board of Health, and the mob which so promptly did its bidding, in burning possibly, twelve or more of private dwellings, and nearly chased, were greatly mistaken as to the source of danger from Quarantine—as to the real nuisance. Where, then, lies the source of danger from Quarantine? By what rule of reasoning [illegible] the Castleton Board of Health make it appear that the twelve private residences within the Quarantine [illegible] burned by the order, were a source of infection to anybody? Who in wise enough to point out in what manner the offices at Quarantine endangered the citizens of Tompkinsville? Such pretensions are preposterous in the extreme. Such hospitals, [illegible] and other similar buildings belonging to the State, and which were burned by the mob at Castleton in September last, were never a source of danger; and the act, therefore, which destroyed them, to speak in mild terms was dictated by madness, and needlessly revolutionary.

But what is the source of danger from Quarantine? Yellow fever during the past season, and also in 1856, spread from the establishment to the shores of Staten Island and Long Island to an alarming extent. If it be true that the danger is not from hospitals, sick persons, officers, passengers and patients, from whence does it emanate? The answer is, from infected vessels and cargoes—from vessels and cargoes arriving from tropical ports, at which yellow fever was prevailing at an epidemic when the vessels took their departure. The exclusive source of danger being thus from infected vessels and cargoes, what an unpardonable mistake, to say the least, was made by the Castleton Board of Health when it ordered the destruction of the State's property at Quarantine. That which was clearly and confessedly not a nuisance and established by the torch of the incendiary, while that which was, and always has been the only source of danger, was left unscathed, unharmed and unchanged!

The foregoing views of the dangers from Quarantine do not the convictions of a single season of official or professional experience, nor is the writer alone in entertaining them. On the other hand, they are deduced from years of careful observation, and fully sustained by the almost unanimous testimony of the profession, not excepting the past incumbents of the Health-office of the Port; for, in 1849, Drs. Manson and Wormouth, formerly Health-officers, but then, as now, residents of Staten Island; then, as now, advocated for the removal of Quarantine; then, as now, large real-estate owners of Richmond County; declared, by affidavit before a legislative Committee, that the spread of yellow fever from Quarantine had arisen from intercourse and communication with infected vessels and cargoes, or with refuse materials abandoned by taken therefrom.

Dr. Manson swore:

"I was formerly Health Officer at the Quarantine establishment at Staten Island; it was from the year 1848 to 1853, (six years;) was an assistant there previously to that; was there in 1847 and 1848, and also from 1853 to 1856 (four years;) was in the establishment at Sandy Hook (ten years;) mention to my appointment as Health Officer; I am somewhat conversant with sanitary establishments; am a physician by education; am intimately acquainted with the Quarantine at Staten Island, and have been for more than thirty years; the population has increased very considerably during that period; I was not much acquainted with the establishment when first located there, which was in 1799; was first attached to it in 1811; the population in the vicinity was then (1811) very sparse; there were comparatively but a few houses in the vicinity; the population was limited, on the north side of the Quarantine ground; at that time, two, three was but one house; there was one dwelling-house and one dwelling-house; the boarding-house was for the accommodation of passengers in vessels quarantined; with the exception of those two, there was not a dwelling-house within nearly half a mile in that direction; on the west side there was not a dwelling-house within a considerable distance. * * * *

The Doctor further swore:

"There are two sources of danger—first, that arising from infected vessels and persons with infected vessels and persons at Quarantine; and second, that which may be carried ashore in the person of persons or from infected vessels." * * *

Again, Doctor Manson swore:

"I have been familiar with the operation of the Quarantine laws since 1799, when I was appointed Assistant Health Officer, and held that office until 1806 (six years;) I was then appointed Health Officer, and held that office until 1826 (seven years;) [illegible] vicinity of the Quarantine ground, and intimately acquainted with the habits of persons in the vicinity; I have resided in the vicinity of the Quarantine ground for the last thirty years; I have employed in the Quarantine establishment, and have visited the establishment frequently; I have visited the establishment when there were persons quarantined there; I have visited the establishment when there were persons quarantined there; I have visited the establishment when there were persons quarantined there
